GCSE Business Studies

We have noted that in the Hodder textbook third edition for GCSE Business it states the following:

“A person specification is for the use of the employer and would not be seen by the applicant for the post.” Page 133

Following further review of this statement the senior team are in agreement that a person specification in many cases may also be viewed by the applicant as a way of determining their suitability for a given post.

Therefore this point should also be included when teaching the content.

I hope this clarification is useful.
