Source A: Drink and Drug Driving

According to data from the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) more than 4300 drivers each year are banned from driving for motoring offences. For example, those convicted of drink or drug driving offences or found guilty of driving while disqualified.

The road safety charity Brake said that dangerous driving and, in particular, drink and drug driving are “still prevalent” on the roads in Northern Ireland. Driving over the alcohol limit or under the influence of drugs is illegal and can have potentially catastrophic consequences for yourself, friends, family and all other road users. If a death or serious injury occurs the consequences of the driver’s actions can last a lifetime.

In Northern Ireland, there are some offences for which, if a disqualification is imposed, another driving test must be taken before applying for the return of a driving licence. These offences relate to drink, drugs, careless driving and dangerous driving. This may impact on a person’s career, family life and status within the community.
