

A FISTFUL OF JAFFA CAKES

SCENE 1.

INT. CANTINA. DAY.

Four Desperadoes - GOOD, BAD and UGLY - sit around a table drinking coffee and eating biscuits from a plate. UGLY reaches for the last biscuit on the plate. The others exchange glances. UGLY withdraws his hand. All three stand up out of their chairs, their hands reaching for their guns. A stand-off ensues.

They stare at each other. Then at the biscuit. Then at each other again. The tension builds as the stand-off continues. GOOD looks steely and confident, eyes narrowing. UGLY looks panicked. BAD looks angry but contained, eyes squinting. UGLY's eyes dart back and forth, trickles of sweat breaking out on his forehead.

Just as the tension reaches fever pitch, GOOD draws first. The others barely even get their guns out of their holsters as GOOD coolly guns them down. They slump down dead. GOOD snatches the last biscuit from the plate and walks off chewing it laconically.