

Building an Extension

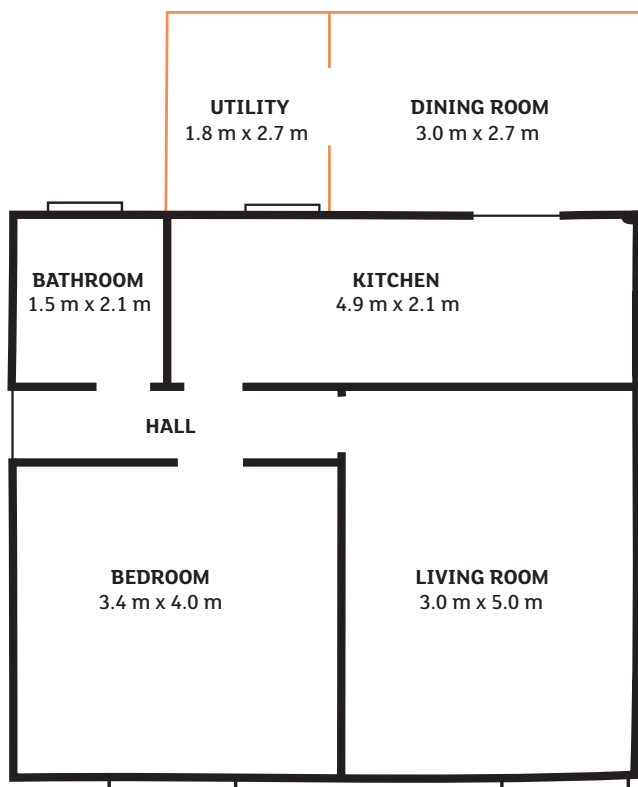

Problem

Aileen is currently considering extending her one bedroom ground floor apartment. She wants to add a dining room off her kitchen that will overlook her back garden.

She has asked an architect to draw up plans that also include a utility room.

Aileen believes that the disruption and expense would only be worthwhile if the extension adds at least 15% to the existing floor space.

Here is the proposed plan for the apartment with the extension.

Consider what Aileen wants and then look at the architect's plans. Do you think the extension will be worthwhile?
