What is the job that you are researching?

St John's Ambulance Brigade leader.

What was the role of a Brigade Leader?
(in your own words)

A St Johns ambulance brigade leader
taught children how to deal with first-aid,
how to salute and what to do when "On Duty?"
You also had to take the cadets to camps such as on the Isle of Sheppy to ride on an amazing open-backed lorry!!!

What do you think would have happened if this job had never existed during WW2? (consequences) Give reasons please.

I think the consequences for this job would lead to bad injuries and death because those clever children have learnt how to do first-aid!!!

They could help them incredibly well!!!
 They wouldn't suffer with out that bunch of great children!!

Do you think this was an important job during the war?
 Please explain your reasons based on your research.

I think this is a very important job in World War 2, I mean, hospitals don't just do the work!!!

Would you have liked to have carried out this job during WW2?
 Please give reasons for your answer.

Maybe I would, maybe not. I like the sound of a land girl but I also like first-aid. I would quite like it because I love looking inside the human body.
